Part B: [REDACTED]'s commentary after receiving clairvoyant and empathic feedback from [REDACTED] following procedure

Note: Due to the psycho-kinetic incident which interrupted this session, the following report was written, in part, post-session, which has caused atypical formatting after section v. It was not possible for [REDACTED] to participate in live transcription for obvious reasons. [REDACTED]'s drawing was also compiled a full day after the reading.

i(a). Rapid visual feedback that is hard to fully record.

[REDACTED] UNABLE TO MODIFY SPEED.

The subject sees facial images of "Amelia," "Petrov," "Lillian" and "Helgiorimir" in quick succession. A number of images are violent or unpleasant, including: a charred corpse (unidentified), various images from Report 004 [ix], a close up of two blue eyes seeping blood, an unknown construct seemingly made of various bodies sewn together which is catching fire and beginning to melt, and a writhing infestation of maggots in the mouth of a dead gray and white cat. There is a constant sensation of a fine cornstarch-like powder running through the subject's hands. The subject is also experiencing dry mouth.

[REDACTED] AND [REDACTED] BOTH REPORT PSYCHOSYMPATHETIC NAUSEA. INTERVANEIOUS DRIP ADJUSTED.

i(b). The subject is not participating in conscious thought, and is in a state of ego dissolution. The overriding emotion is one of violent rage.

ii(a). The subject reenacts the events of Report 002 [i, v] (Altercation with "Petrov" in the theater location). Events occur in non sequential order and often repeat themselves. There is a sensation of time dilation. In this presentation of events, "Amelia" is notably shown to be present as a non-acting observer at each point in the struggle.

ii(b). The subject is vaguely cognizant of his conscious agency, but appears to be actively trying to relinquish self-control, such as to not have to be "awake" for the session. There is still and intense feeling of rage, but the events also seem to evoke pity, emasculation, resentment, envy and desire. Emotional feedback is confused, to say the least.

iii(a). The subject experiences bodily disassociation and appears to be standing outside of his unconscious body in the memory. The location suddenly becomes illuminated by an unknown light source. He watches as "Petrov" repeatedly beats his the head and face of his prone form. "Amelia" is notably still present. Close attention is paid to the patterns of blood against the stone floor. There is the scent of grass, and a sudden indication that the scene has shifted to an outdoor

iii(b). The subject has a feeling of sudden mania upon watching these events. There an increasing build up of anticipation and an unobfuscated desire toward self-annihilation at this point. Once more the subject tries to push himself out of the zone of conscious thought.

iv(a). The subject is surrounded by an ashen white sand on all sides. Nothing else is visible. There is the scent of smoke and a sudden sensation of a metallic coppery taste in the subject's mouth. The subject repeatedly pulls the sand to him and it seems to undulate and reform into various curves reminiscent of alternately feminine and serpentine forms. There is a synesthetic auditory/tactile sensation from the feel of the sand between his fingers. The words "who Sired Hreidmdar, who Sired Dagna, who Sired Jameson, who Sired Sirius" are apparent as it touches his skin. The figure of the winged snake, previously mentioned in Report 003 [vii(a)] manifests itself.

iv(b). The subject is in an extreme state of delusional thought. Emotional output is again severely jumbled, but the overriding feelings detected are anger and denial. There is obvious dream logic to the actions the subject recalls.

[REDACTED] ASKS TO HALT PROCEEDINGS. [REDACTED] AUTHORIZES THE ADMINISTRATION OF A GENERAL SEDATIVE WITH ORDERS TO RESUME IN 10 MINUTES.

v(a). The subject is in an undefined space surrounded by a diaphanous plasmic substance. "Petrov" is intuited to be present, but is not visible. The subject grasps in all directions around him compulsively.

v(b). The subject is under the distinct impression that "Petrov", although not visible or producing any sensory input, is mocking him. The sensation of anger is as severe as observed in section i.

BREAK IN TRANSCRIPT DUE TO PSYCHO KINETIC INCIDENT (SEE [REDACTED] REPORT # [REDACTED] FOR DETAILS).

[REDACTED]-2008: Impression of data during and after the outburst by [REDACTED]

"[REDACTED] was increasingly resistant to continued probing, in spite of the break and general sedative. I experienced a sympathetic hallucination as her control over the session began to break down. I must assume that this was in unison with a sympathetic hallucination on her part. The subject was obviously once more in a highly abnormal psychological state, only far more disturbing than the initial "wave."

I experienced symptoms consistent with an extreme panic disorder (in particular heart palpitations and tremors), and was under the delusional belief that [REDACTED] was "snowing", as if her body was made of a general array of swirling minute particles that disseminated whenever I brushed my hand through her. I was gripped at the time with an intense desire to hold her down and keep her from moving out of reach, as though she were on the verge of blowing away.

I remember feeling a sense of mental and emotional incongruity, as though my present concerns were suddenly carried to absurd extremes and directions. The arrangement of the ceiling tiles caused me great emotional anguish and I developed a paranoid belief that I was being persecuted for imagined crimes. I recall feeling increasingly agitated about a visit to my sister last weekend (a visit by all accounts unremarkable and pleasant outside of the circumstances of this event). I did not experience worry or fear at the various psycho-kinetic phenomena transpiring at the time, in spite of their actual danger.

I eventually acted on my desire to hold [REDACTED] such as to prevent her imagined departure (no doubt exacerbating the situation on her end). At this point in time I felt a sudden drop in the intensity of the subject's agitation, and will go on the record as stating that I believe the situation would have ended peaceably had [REDACTED]'s duress not been an overriding factor at that point.

Given my reactions to the incident and the lasting effects it has had, I have sent a formal request that I be replaced by another member of [REDACTED] be established as [REDACTED]'s second in this investigation.

I should also like to add a personal note that the data received from this subject has become increasingly repetitive and un-useful, and that the risks and costs now associated with continued experimentation are high enough that I would strongly recommend limiting the rest of the probe to routine dissection and cataloging. Furthermore, while I am aware of the often non-objective sentiments that handlers can develop, I will state truthfully that I find the continued telepathic probing of this particular hemophage to border on unethical, both as regards [REDACTED] and the subject himself. I believe the available data on the subtype "Malkavian" serves to back these concerns on several points.
